

SANA ARORA

is a Delhi-based singer & guitarist who's soothing voice is incomparable. Someone who has always been passionate about music, she has headed all music societies in school and college. She loves soulful and pop music with a hint of country, new and retro, though she appreciates all genres, in all forms and languages. She is trained in Indian classical music but loves and performs Western music and plays the guitar.

Sana has performed at various venues as a soloist and also as the lead singer of the band "Poco Loco" founded by seasoned musician, Paddy.

Inspired and motivated by her father who has also been equally passionate about music, Sana has a unique style of singing that is simple and uncluttered yet powerful and sophisticated.